Jane CALLAHAN

"Due to poor dental hygiene and not the best dental care during my childhood, I have had a full upper and partial denture since my mid-twenties. I also had an unrealistic dread of pain associated with dentists. I felt fortunate that my dentures always fit well and I thought they looked pretty good, but for about 35 years even though I had new dentures they always were made to look like the previous set. When I started noticing smiles, I realized that my teeth were small and yellowish so looked kind of old-fashioned.

It had been nine years since I had seen a dentist and my dentures were literally falling apart and affecting my choice of foods. When I read about Dr. Samaha being chosen for the Gold Star Award, she sounded like someone I could trust. I like the description of her 'caring hands and compassionate nature.' I also was impressed with what was described as "her interest in the total health of her patients." All of these things were absolutely true to my experience!

I was impressed with the level of caring on my first visit, not only by Dr. Samaha, but her entire staff. She is also an artist and I think that gives her an advantage in the complete precision of her dental work. I admire the fact that she doesn't rest on her laurels, but is continually growing through research and study to enhance her skills. Dr. Samaha improved my looks and as everyone says, 'took years off my age,' with my new smile! She wanted it to be as pretty and natural as possible. They look so fresh!

I am so very grateful for what Dr. Samaha has done for me. I feel so confident in my smile that I smile bigger and more comfortably than ever before! I love the fact that even strangers compliment me on my beautiful smile!"
